| Campus Recreation | Team Practices         | Since you're forming your own teams, you also coordinate your own practices. Practice as much or as little as you want, but Intramural Sports does not schedule times for teams to practice. In general, all fields at the IM Sports complex are booked between 6 pm and 12 Midnight Sunday through Thursday nights. You may be able to find a corner of the field to practice on, but the place is pretty packed and it's unlikely. As long as the green flag is flying (good weather, complex is open), you can come out to the IM Sports Complex prior to 6:00 pm on these days or at almost anytime on Friday or Saturday to practice. There will be times when other activities are scheduled, so it's still not a guarantee that you'll be able to practice, but the chances that space will be available are much better. Check the online Intramural Sports Complex Events Calendar for details on what's scheduled to take place at the Complex. Tully Gym is available only for scheduled campus recreation activities. So if you're looking for space to practice an indoor sport, you'll need to try the Leach Center. | http://fsu.campusrec.com/im/schedules/index.html               | Mark Crager, Intramural |

| Student Counseling Center | Group Counseling                            | The Student Counseling Center offers a variety of support groups each semester. A group is formed when people with similar issues want to discuss and work on their common concerns. Groups consist of four to twelve people usually meeting from six to eight sessions. The individuals in a group meet face-to-face with one or more trained group therapists and talk about what is troubling them. Members also give feedback to each other by expressing their own feelings about what someone says or does in the group. This interaction gives group members an opportunity to try out new ways of behaving and to learn more about the way they interact with others. What makes the situation unique is that it is a closed and safe system. The content of the group sessions is confidential--what members talk about or disclose is not discussed outside the group. | http://www.fsu.edu/%7Estaffair/counsel/group.htm       | Anika Fields     |

| University Housing | Apartment Living                                  | University Housing offers several apartment communities dedicated to meeting the various needs of students. Undergraduate students above the freshmen level may choose efficiency and townhouse living in McCollum Hall or 3 or 4 bedroom, 2 bathroom living environment in the new apartment facility. Because of the priority given to returning students, these facilities typically fill before new, incoming students arrive on campus. Only in situations when late cancellations are received is it likely that a new applicant will receive an assignment to these apartment facilities. | http://www.housing.fsu.edu/housing/ungrad/aptliving.html | Rita Moser |
